[Webinar] MSHA Special Investigation Management: Handling §105(c) and §110 Investigations

On Wednesday, May 26th at 1:00 P.M. EST, join Nicholas W. Scala for a webinar regarding MSHA Special Investigation Management: Handling §105(c) and §110 Investigations.

In any given year MSHA inspections are common and required. Depending on the operation, MSHA will be on-site at least two times per year for a surface mine, and at least 4 times per year at an underground operation. But what happens when MSHA's presence on site is more targeted, whether to investigate complaints of discrimination or interference with a miner's rights under the Mine Act, or to look into the alleged personal culpability of a member of mine management? In these circumstances, the individual managers who typically act as the operator's representative can be caught off guard and even be the target of the investigations This presentation will explore the framework of these investigation, and strategies for managing the investigation while also protecting the rights and defenses of individuals and the company.

Participants in this webinar will learn the following:

- What are §105 or §110 investigations and how they are initiated;
- How to manage a special investigation as a mine operator or independent contractor;
- What types of actions are protected by §105; and
- Best practices and strategies for defending against special investigations.
