OSHA's Fatality, Hospitalization & Amputation Reporting Rule: Lessons Learned [Webinar Recording]

On November 14, 2017, Eric J. Conn and Lindsay A. DiSalvo of Conn Maciel Carey's national OSHA Practice Group presented a webinar regarding "OSHA's Fatality, Hospitalization & Amputation Reporting Rule."

In former President Obama's second term, his Administration rolled-out a major change to OSHA's Fatality & Significant Injury Reporting Rule. Not to be confused with the new Electronic Recordkeeping Rule (which requires certain employers to submit injury and illness data to OSHA on annual basis), this amended rule required all employers to make prompt phone calls to OSHA when work related fatalities or covered in-patient hospitalizations and amputations occur.

The image is a promotional graphic for a webinar recording. At the top left, it says "the OSHA DEFENSE report" in orange and blue text. Below this is a photograph of safety gear: a pair of yellow work boots, a yellow hard hat, and safety glasses. To the right of the photo is the firm's name "CONN MACIEL CAREY" in blue, stacked vertically. Below the photo and name, the title "OSHA Fatality and Serious Injury Reporting Rule: Lessons Learned" is written in large blue font. Underneath the title, the date "November 14, 2017" is centered. Below the date, the firm name "Conn Maciel Carey LLP" and the practice area "OSHA • Workplace Safety Practice" are listed. At the bottom, the names and titles of the speakers are shown: "Eric J. Conn, Chair" and "Lindsay A. DiSalvo, Associate". At the very bottom, there is a small orange bar with copyright information and the firm's website URL.

The rule has resulted in thousands more reports of incidents to OSHA than before. Now, three years into the new reporting scheme, we have learned a lot of lessons about what is being reported to OSHA, what non-mandatory reports are often made, and what OSHA is doing with all the new reported incidents.

During this webinar, participants learned:

- Nuances of OSHA's Fatality & Serious Injury Reporting Rule
- Common Reporting Mistakes and Misunderstandings

- Data and trends of reports made to OSHA
- Actions OSHA is taking in response to injury reports
